Copyright

Once an article is accepted for inclusion in the journal, authors are required to sign the Publication Agreement prior to its publication. This agreement will enable the journal through UP Diliman to protect the copyrighted material for the author/s while retaining the author's proprietary rights.

The agreement, in consideration for the resources expended by the journal and UP Diliman in publishing the article, grants the University permanent, non-exclusive, worldwide, royalty-free license over the article in order to enable the University to perform its mission of making knowledge reasonably accessible to the public. This may include the publication of the article or portions thereof in any format, through any medium now in existence or developed in the future, including but not limited to print, electronic, and digital media, computerized retrieval systems, and other formats.

The agreement also allows the Journal to authorize third-party publishers, aggregators, and printers to publish the article or to include the article in databases or other services in order to allow for wider dissemination.
